CASH AND WIRE WITHDRAWAL DISCLOSURE & LETTER OF INDEMNIFICATION

FOR YOUR OWN PROTECTION, PLEASE READ THIS FORM IN FULL PRIOR TO TRANSACTING.

You may be at risk at losing money. Scam artists often pressure innocent people into giving them money by offering attractive rewards or to avoid unpleasant results. Below are questions based on actual fraud cases documented by law enforcement. Please consider each to see if any sound similar to your own circumstances.

Are you being pressured to ...

- Give someone cash, wire funds or buy gift cards or crypto?
- Accept money, a wire or a deposit intended for someone else?
- Make someone a power of attorney or joint account holder on one or more of your accounts?

Have you been contacted by ...

8

A tech company, like Microsoft, via pop-up or email? When you call, they ask for access to your device and then indicate they need money/gift cards to clean or debug it, remove content or to make it more secure.

A long-lost friend or a romantic interest whom you have not met in person who may say they are overseas for work or in the military and need help to access their money. They offer to send you funds and ask you to wire some back, or ask for your online banking or cash app credentials to transfer money in.

The IRS or other law enforcement or government official, or a law or collection firm demanding money for taxes, an alleged debt or to aide a criminal investigation? They indicate that you may face arrest, deportation or a lien on your home if you do not comply.

Someone who knows your family member or friend or claims to be your family member/friend. It is indicated the person you know is out of the area and urgently needs money because they are stranded, in jail, kidnapped or otherwise in trouble? You have been told that contacting the person at the telephone number you know or another family will jeopardize their well-being.

Someone with a once-in-a-lifetime investment, employment (work from home) or charitable giving opportunity? To take part, you need to send them money, a cashier's check, a wire, gift cards or crypto immediately or agree to take a deposit and forward funds from the deposit. To not take part risks losing the opportunity or saving lives.

An administrator for a prize, foreign lottery or estate who requires money for taxes and/or mailing fees in order for you to collect.

A buyer of an item you have posted for sale, offering to send a check or funds for more than you requested? They tell you to keep a little more for yourself and send the difference to them by wire or gift cards.

If you answer yes to any of these questions, you may be the intended victim of a fraudster. You risk losing all money you give to such individuals. Professional scammers know how to manipulate innocent people. They may sound pleasant, friendly, authoritative or even threatening, and may provide you with their cell phone number and/or email (g-mail) address. A fraudster may stay in contact with you for days, weeks or even months to gain your trust.

If you are unsure what to do, or feel frightened or intimidated, please call your local police before completing your requested transaction. They are trained how to distinguish scams from legitimate needs.

If you decide to continue with the requested transaction, you must sign the following Acknowledgement and Indemnification.

 - □ my cash withdrawal request and understand by doing so, I assume full responsibility for loss in the event the cash is lost, stolen or destroyed; or
 - □ my wire transfer request and understand by doing so, the wire transfer cannot be recalled, and I assume full responsibility for loss in the event the recipient requested the funds under false pretenses;
- I understand that cash in my personal possession earns no interest/dividends and that cash placed in a safe deposit box at any financial institution renders the funds ineligible for depositary insurance by the FDIC, NCUA or any state or private funds deposit insurance agency;
- I freely accept these and any other risks and my decision to withdraw these funds has not been made under any form of coercion, threat or duress.

By signing below, I agree to hold Labor Credit Union and its employees harmless for accommodating my decision to withdraw funds, either by cash or by wire transfer.
